DEBATING THE SCHOOL SYSTEM

THE supercilious treatment of the Tonopah school trustees by the commissioners of Nye county in refusing to extend the special levy for the maintenance of the public schools is eclipsed by the action of the highest seat of learning in the state. If all accounts are true the regents of the University of Nevada have lent themselves to a meretricious part in the game of politics. The university has been turned over to the Democratic party as freely as though it were an integral part of the political administration of the state instead of a sacred trust pledged to the future of the rising men and women of Nevada. Ever since the election of the present executive the university has been dictating to the voters of the state and using its every influence to build up a machine for the re-election of Senator Pittman. While enacting this role the regents and President Hendricks may have been imposed on but, if such should prove to be the case, the discovery would write these men down as the most egregious lot of fools ever posing without cap and bells. Hendricks went to Washington to espouse the 7,000,000 acre land grant to the cattle barons. Presumably the trip was made at the expense of the university. His return was speedily followed by the appearance of Hon. Charles A. Towne, the silver tongued orator of New York, formerly of Minnesota. Towne came here to address the graduating class of the university and then forthwith sallied forth on a speech-making tour in which he devoted most of his remarks to adulation of Pittman.

On May 19, two days after the university exercises, the Hon. Chas. A. Towne opened the state campaign of Senator Pittman in Elko, speaking under the auspices of the Democratic central committee.

"The speaker," says the Elko Free Press, "upheld his reputation as an orator and dwelt especially on the importance of retaining Senator Pittman in Washington."

The Reno Journal does not know whether the bringing of Mr. Towne to Nevada was incident to the university commencement exercises or to the opening of Mr. Pittman's campaign for re-election.

"We may infer, however, that it was incident to both," continues the Journal. "Mr. Pittman is sponsor for the time being, at least, for the 7,000,000 acre land grant bill. Hence, Mr. Towne came to Nevada on two missions, one to be commencement day orator and the other to fire the first big gun in Mr. Pittman's campaign. We know that not all of Mr. Towne's expenses, incident to his trip, were paid by the university. A part was so paid. Perhaps Mr. Towne paid the balance, perhaps he did not. However, he spoke for Mr. Pittman in Elko."

"All of which leads to the conclusion that the university is very much in politics."

PEACE TALKS SIGNIFICANT

ALL this talk about peace signifies there is a momentous crisis approaching. Where there is smoke there must be fire. The clouds of smoke are growing so dense that there is scarcely any attention paid to disclaimers from those who would be the chief beneficiaries of any effort to bring about a normal status between the European nations. The chief objection to such proceedings is the concrete truth that the nations of the world pitted against Germany have made very little impression on the adamant front presented by the Teutonic line. Germany is the only nation that has scored any material advances and it is conceded that the kaiser will not entertain any peace proposals having for their base the relinquishment of territory wrested from her foes. That is where the rub comes. Great Britain is committed to the restoration of annexed Belgium provinces which she has not been able to regain through force of arms. Russia is confident that she will yet reach the coveted goal at the Dardanelles and it is certain the czar will not sanction any steps looking to forego Constantinople when every day places his troops closer to the outlet that has been the desire of Russia for the past three hundred years.

Germany occupies the strongest position through the capture of some of the richest provinces of France including lands containing inestimable riches of coal and iron and it is not likely that she will consent to give up the blood drenched lands which she has retained in the face of millions of men hurled against her banners.

England is growing restive under the passive resistance of the British army whose effectiveness has been destroyed or sadly impaired by diffusion over the world. In the House of Commons during the discussion of the budget providing for the appropriation of another billion and a half dollars there was unqualified condemnation of the military policy of the government. From statements made there it appears that England has something over 3,000,000 men under arms with scarcely half a million on the front where the French are so gallantly struggling to maintain the keystone of the approach to Paris. The fact that Germany is able to withstand attack and renew its aggressive after repeated reverses fills the heart of the average Briton with dismay. It may be a wearing out process, but it is a costly experience that serves of doubtful use beyond protracting the horrors of the war.

Peace advocates may find some loophole out of the dilemma to warrant tentative consideration of peace measures but, at present, it looks like the encounter between an irresistible force and an immovable object where neither side can show sufficient mastery of the situation to warrant overtures for permanent peace.

WILSON HAS A WALK OVER IN CONVENTION

NO real candidate has appeared to contest with Wilson for the Democratic nomination, but there have been tests, nevertheless, which show that he is not without opposition in his own party. In Nebraska an obscure liveryman secured about one-fourth of the votes cast in the Democratic primary, while in Ohio a candidate for delegate, who was known to be an outspoken critic of Wilson, got almost a third of the total vote. Senator Pomerene, an administration senator and a candidate for re-election, ran way behind his colleagues on the delegate ticket. It is nowhere evident that Wilson is holding his strength of four years ago.

COUNTY ASKS FOR MORE TIME FOR TRIAL OF THE CASE

for slashing Nick Lasovich in a saloon fight which was set for hearing this afternoon was postponed again by request of the district attorney who said he wanted to wait a few days longer to see what would be the result of the cutting. So far as could be learned the condition of the patient has no alarming features as he is said to be progressing nicely.
